WHY PURSUE A DEGREE FROM A FRENCH BUSINESS SCHOOL?

France is a world leader in several industries.

While often associated with luxury, beauty, fashion and design giants like LVMH and Dior, France is actually a world leader across industries. The world's largest energy provider, EDF, is French, as is insurance giant AXA. Peugeot, Renault and Michelin are stalwarts of the automotive industry, and BNP Paribas is a giant of the banking world. As the digital economy surges, Orange S.A. is the parent company of many of the world's most recognizable telecommunications providers.

Business schools in France prize diverse, multicultural cohorts

With a 20% international student population, ESGCI looks to invite business professionals and global leaders from diverse backgrounds (geographically, racially, by profession/industry and more) to pursue the ultimate degree in business education, the DBA.

French Business School are more cost effective than in other countries

While the education style and degree are world class, France offers quality business education at a fraction of the cost of equivalent institutions in other countries like the US.

WHY PURSUE A DBA?

Position yourself as an expert in your field of choice

The DBA is designed to produce business leaders and experts in a field of choice. Write an in-depth dissertation on any topic of interest to you in the business management field and cement your position as an expert on the topic.

Access the academic title of “Dr”

The DBA degree confers on individuals the right to use the academic title doctor. It is considered a professional doctorate degree.

Open yourself to new Career pathways

Use the expert tag and the doctor title to publish your work in professional journals, speak at conferences, offer consulting services in your chosen field or even teach at universities.

Stand out in an uncertain and crowded labour market

Globally there are 250,000 MBA graduates each year and less than 5,000 DBA graudates.
